A light dry sherry free from the alcohol with which this wine is too often fortified, to the detriment alike of the palate and stomach of the consumer, has long been wanted, and in its absence this once popular wine has fullen a good deal out of favour.

It is not very often that any port in China rets a new Consul and a new Commissioner on the same day. That this should happen in so small a port as Ichang is the more remarkable. But not only did Mr. Fraser and Mr. von Fries both take charge on the 1st of June, but the steamer that brought up the latter, brought up the new Koman Catholic Bishop, so well-known as Pero Benjamin, as also a missionary to open a house for the China Inland Mission here. personnel is thus nearly all changed, but the place is still the same, and it only remains to be seen what the new arrivals will make of it. exponse, too was incurred in offerts to get her off the von Fries has, however, got his loave from November, so he will not have much opportunity for great changes. THE GREAT FIRE AT LOU CHOV

Chung-king, 1st May. On the 12th of April the district city of Louchow was visited by one of the most dire calamities that has ever befallen any city in the Chinese Empire; over three-fifths of the entire city and suburbs were destroyed by fire. fire is said to have originated outside of the city, near the river, through burning joss paper. The wind blowing strong at the time, some of the burning paper was blown into a stack of dried grass used for fuel, the fire spreading with great rapidity in all directions, so that in a very few minutes it was entirely beyond control. The loss of life has been very great, said to number many hundreds, very many people barely escaping with their lives, saving nothing but what they had on. Numbers were trodden to death in the rush, and not a few were burned in their houses, having become entirely surrounded by the fire. currently reported that there have been and clinical demonstration. over ten thousand families burned some estimate the number much greater, but that is. industries in Western China. The situation of the city is the most favourable that could be to promote a rapid conflagration, as it lies ou the slope of a mountain facing the northeast cale which was blowing at that time and the buildings, all old, being of wood and thoroughly dry; those near the river were chiefly temporary constructions and covered with grass or bamboo mats. Under such circomstances it will be readily understood why the flames spread with such fearful rapidity. Money has been pretty liberally subscribed to aid the sufferers all over the country. Chenton and the neighbouring districts are said to have raised nearly half a million of Taels for them. IMPERIAL FEDERATIO

The Imperial Federation League, in spite of the absonce of any definite proposals for carrying, into effect the noble object it has in view, has done and is doing most useful work by organizing and reinforcing the spirit which laid the foundations and raised the superstructure of the British Empire. Not many years ago it seemed possible that, through mere weariness and want of faith, Englishmen would allow the great inheritance of the nation to slip away from them, and that the conquests of the race, whether achieved over the forces of nature or over Powers, would be broken up once more into communities without cohesion or common interests. This is no longer to be feared while the ideas represented by the Imperial Federation League are spreading among the people. The speeches delivered by Lord Rosebery and Lord Carnarvon contain much controversial matter, but on the main point there is little room for difference of opinion among patriotic men. The resolve to leave no effort untried to avert dangerous processes of bric that has been built up by the labours of generations, has struck deep roots in the national mind, and the sentiment, we believe, is widely shared by our colonial fellow-subjects. It seems reasonable to hope that out of this state of things there may arise some practical solution for the difficulties which have hitherto confronted every scheme for establishing a closer union between the colonies and the mother country. Yet we are constrained to admit that Lord Rosebery is still as far as ever from presenting the subject for discussion in a form that practical politician rean grapple with. We entirely agree with what Lord Rosebery says, eloquently and ingeniously, in anwer to the turnt that it is only in her decrepitude that England lusawakened to the necessity of cultivating the favour of her dinghter nations, and has tried to "hang on to the coat-tails" of the colonists. Whatever ebullitions of tempor may occur from time to time -and we fully recognize their danger, so long as the connexion remains a loose and indefinite one—the feeling of the colonies towards the mother country is, in the main, warmly affectionate and stauchly loyal When Lord Rosebery, however, tells us that we must not renture to suggest a solume of federation, but must wait for the suggestion to come from the colonists, he appears to contemplate an indefinite postponement of any decisive steps towards the desired result The colonics, it must be remembered, are much less closely connected with one another than any one of them with the mother country; they have very different interests, characters, and opportunities hopeful, though it may be a very prodent, policy to beg the populations of the Caradian Dominion and the Australian settlements, of Mauritius, Singapore, and Hongkong to agree upon a plan of Imperial Poderation which must then be submitted to the people of the United Kingdom. Moreover, if this procedure is indispensable, we cannot see what advantage Lord working men to visit the colonies and to see for

It is needless to say that even such proposals, of which at present there is no sign, would be violently opposed by many politicians at home, and probably by not a few in the colonies. While, however, the colonies insist upon their right to tax the commerce of the mother country as well as of each other as heavily as that of foreign nations, an agreement on the basis of fiscal policy appears to be out of the question, and without such an agreement the Imperial Federation League, in spite of it: excellent intentions a: d its zealous industry, is not likely to carry its work far beyond the reedest, though useful. measures for co-operation in Imperial defence

A very knotty point arising out of photography | Mi is being talked about in legal oircles. Some months since, it seems, Mr. A --- died, leaving considerable property, but no near relatives, and apparently no will, though it was known to the Per deceased man's friends that he had often spoken Ph of having made one. At length, steps having been taken to administer the estate by the late Mr. A --- 's only nephew, a most strange thing happened. The nephew, in going through the S' dead man's papers and effects, found a box Sha in a supboard, which proved to be full of Ste undeveloped dry plates, Mr. A having been a successful amateur photographer. To shorten the story, when these plates were developed by a photographer; one of them w a found to be a photograph of a will complete in every legal detail, though so short as to sooming. Wally have originally been drawn up on a half sheet of foolscap. By this photographic will, most of Mr. A — 's property is bequesthed to a hotel waiter, and the most question is, can this dry plate be admitted to probate in the absence of all traces of the written document of which it is a photograph? Of course the wags reply "No," on the ground that it is known to be impossible "to prove a negative." The hotel waiter, on the other hand, has found lawyers willing to take up his case, so possibly the muiter may come into court before long.

The Zoolegical Society of France the Paris correspondent of the Daily News says has warned the Government that a great ornithological calamity is impending. The swallows seem to think seriously of not taking up their summer quarters in France. The toughness of their flesh protects them from the attentions of the cook, and a superstition in their favour preserves their nests. But the modists who uses these birds for trimming his brought about a plau of campaign against them, which it seems they have observed. The Department of the Bouches du Rhone is one of the great landingplaces for swallows coming from Africa. Engines for killing them in hundreds have w been laid along the coast, formed of wires con- l'o nected with electrical batteries. When fatigued by their over-ses flight the birds perch on the wires and are struck dead. The bodies are then prepared for the milliner, and crates containing thousands of them are sent on to Paris. This Me has been going on for some years, and it was noticed this spring that swallows have not landed on the low-lying coast, but have gone forther west or east, and that they go in larger numbers than they used to other parts of Europe. There are places, says the Loological Society in its petition, where they formerly were very nume- rel rous, but which they have now deserted, although No there has been no falling-off in the guats and Am other flying insects on which they live.
